

Chicago Virtual Charter School “Lesson Plan”

If we improve staff knowledge and competencies and improve opportunity for staff collaboration and input, we will improve our internal processes and procedures, all the activities CVCS does as a school, including teaching practices. And if we improve our processes and procedures, we will improve our communication as well as improve the quality and depth of teaching and our programs and services. If we do that, we will maximize our resources, which includes financial resources and teachers’ time and efforts. We also believe that improving the quality and depth of teaching and our programs and services will have a direct impact on student achievement, student and family and engagement, and our families’ satisfaction with our school. Moreover, maximizing our use of resources and making the very best use of teachers’ time will result in improved family satisfaction, increased student achievement, and increased family and student engagement.
